1. About cookies

Cookies are small text files which are stored on your computer. They are used by websites to track use, remember preferences, log into secure areas of a website and various other tasks.

2. Cookies that we use:

We use cookies to create a better browsing experience for users. The cookies we use are:

a. Analytical Cookies

We may use analytical cookies to track the number of users, the pages they visit, duration of visit and a number of other useful points on how the website is used by users

We are not able to identify you as an individual using analytics Cookies.

b. Functionality Cookies

We may use Cookies as a method of storing information which allows you to browse and use our website efficiently.

We may use such Cookies to perform tasks such as the information you filled into a form, your credentials to keep you logged into a secure area of the website, and to remember various other preferences.

c. Cookies from third-parties

The Web is an integrated place. Like most other websites, we may have third-party applications and material on our website. Some of these may use Cookies to track various metrics, store preferences and customise their material to you.

An example of this on our site would be social media buttons such as Facebook and Instagram buttons which allow users to like, share and comment about what they find on websites.

We are unable to change third party cookies and third parties are unable to change ours.

3. Turning Cookies off in your browser

If you decide to turn Cookies off in your browser you need to be aware that some features may not work as expected and designed and some website areas may not be available to you.

Most browsers allow you to disable cookies. This is usually via the preferences or options tab. Please see the help function in your browser.

If you are worried about cookies please see the Your Online Choices website:
